Spaghetti dinner to help family of local teacher

AMY MILLS has taught English and led drama productions in Washington Unified School District. She died Mother's Day in hospice care, and friends are raising money to help her husband and two children with medical expenses from cancer treatment.

Help the family of Westmore Oaks Elementary School teacher Amy Mills by showing up for some spaghetti, a silent auction and raffle on May 31.

Mills, 33, lost her fight with cancer on Sunday -- Mother's Day. She leaves behind a husband as well as children age eight and two.

According to Westmore Oaks secretary Holly Erickson, Mills was a teacher in West Sacramento's school district since 2010. She taught English and ran the drama club, helping to put on productions of "Annie" and "Horton Hears a Who" on the Yolo High School gymnasium stage.

Her family has incurred large expenses from her medical treatment, which has included flights back and forth between West Sacramento and "Cancer Treatment Centers of America."

Supporters are offering the spaghetti fundraiser beginning at 5 p.m. on Saturday, May 31, at the Moose Lodge, 3240 Jefferson Blvd. in Southport.

$10 in advance or $12 at the door; $5 for kids; children under three are no charge. Please bring a dessert to share.

To buy tickets, contact Erickson at spiritjunkie22@yahoo.com or (916) 842-8932.

Erickson said that donations to the family can also be made by check to Mills's mother, Teresa Redwine, care of Holly Erickson, 1704 Lakewood Dr., West Sacramento CA 95691.

Sycamore Trail upgraded

The SYCAMORE TRAIL in January was neither open, inviting, nor safe. The first phase of a jointly-funded project will start to clean it up, adding trees and paths for bikes and pedestrians. Eventually, the trail will become part of the city's trail web and part of the "Safe Routes to Schools" network.

A blighted urban pathway called the "Sycamore Trail" is getting a rehab, in part courtesy of an $80,000 grant from Wells Fargo.

"It had burned-out mattresses and broken bottles and was considered a dangerous area to go through or walk nearby. So the Yolo County Children's Alliance and the City of West Sacramento decided to change that," said Lori Aldrete in a press release for the Yolo County Children's Alliance.

The Sycamore Trail is an urban corridor running north from West Capitol Avenue near Poplar Avenue, next to Westfield Village Elementary School. Under the corridor lies part of the Lower Northwest Interceptor pipeline for Sacramento's regional sewer system, which is routed through West Sacramento.

"No one wanted their kids to travel through this undeveloped open space near a West Sacramento school – but some children were using it as a short-cut," said Aldrete.

The first phase of trail renovation started in March. Partners – including the City of West Sacramento and the Northern California Construction Training Program – will be "installing lighting, landscaping and picnic tables/benches; removing graffiti and fences; and providing general cleanup and trees," she reported.

The city plans to add bicycle and pedestrian trails to further blend it into West Sacramento's master-planned network of trails. A grant from the Sacramento Area Council of Governments is helping to make the project happen.

The first phase of the Sycamore Trail rehab is scheduled to be finished by June, 2015, said Aldrete.

'Senior Resource Fair' will return next year

Over 40 organizations passed out information at the "Senior Resource Fair" in West Sacramento on May 2. The fair was organized by the Bryte & Broderick Community Action Network ("BBCAN") and the city parks department.

The fair provided information "that enhances and supports our seniors' daily living, health and interests," said Charlotte Dorsey of BBCAN. Some of the agencies on hand were the local police department, bus district, veterans service office, elder nutrition program ("Meals on Wheels") and more. There was also information on the "active aging" programs of the city parks and recreation program, a raffle, and free blood pressure checks.

BBCAN plans to bring back the fair annually.

Standoff at Bryte Avenue apartment

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A north-city police standoff lasted several hours but ended peacefully Friday night.

The incident occurred at an apartment at 815 Bryte Avenue. Police responded when a woman called 911. A dispatcher noted that "banging and yelling" was heard in the background of the 911 call.

A pregnant woman at the scene told an officer that her live-in boyfriend had picked up something heavy inside the apartment, damaged some property, and told her "B---, now I'm going to have to kill you."

A records check showed that suspect Adam Christopher Rudi, 31, was on searchable probation and was the subject of a restraining order. But "when officers tried to contact Rudi, he ran inside the apartment, barricaded the doors and windows with furniture, and refused to cooperate with lawful orders from officers for approximately four hours," according to a police report.

The report also alleged: "During this time, Rudi broke multiple windows, damaged walls and other property inside the residence. . . and threw several large heavy objects out of the windows in the direction of officers. Rudi also threatened to kill officers."

Rudi was taken into custody without incident to conclude the standoff.

Do you remember your first kiss?

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

The other night my daughter called me with excitement in her voice as she blurted out, "You're not going to believe what happened at school today!"

"What?" I asked with interest, assuming she was talking about the grade school her two young boys attend.

"Riley (my 9-year old grandson) got himself a girlfriend!"

"You're kidding."

"No I'm not! And when I went to pick him up, that's all he and his teacher could talk about."

"I didn't even know Riley was interested in girls."

"Well, as I understand it, a little girl in his class more or less made Riley her boyfriend, although he was apparently a very willing conquest."

"What did she do?"

"She basically just started holding hands with him, although according to their teacher, somewhere along the line Riley got kissed."

"Riley kissed a girl?" I asked in amazement.

"Well, I think it was more her kissing him than him kissing her, but their lips definitely ended up together. Plus according to Riley, there was apparently a kiss on the forehead involved, too. Now one kiss seems pretty harmless, but if we're talking about two or more, then good heavens, that's getting pretty close to making out. Dad, I'm not ready for Riley to have a love life!"

"That's pretty good that he was willing to talk to you about it, though, don't you think?"

"Are you kidding? That's all he's been talking about since he got in the car! He says she's very cute and that he really likes having a girlfriend. He even said she is `sweet as a strawberry'. So what am I supposed to do? Isn't this stuff supposed to happen a few years down the road when puberty hits?"

"Actually," I said, "if I remember right, one of your teachers reported that you had kissed a boy in class when you were about Riley's age, so I don't think the world is going to come to an end. Maybe it's just in the Fisher genes?"

After I had finished talking with my daughter, I suddenly found myself thinking back to my earliest ventures into romance and recalled that most of them took place at garage dances. When I was about 13 – maybe it was even 12 – my twin sister suggested to my parents that we have a garage dance. And since my mother was convinced that I was completely lacking in all the social graces, she decided that in addition to it being a fun time for my sister, a garage dance would be a good way for me to start correcting the problem. Anyway, the idea somehow caught on and before long all of our friends for blocks around were hosting Saturday night dances in their colorfully decorated garages. They were very simple affairs, with parents for chaperones, cake to eat and punch to drink, and Ricky Nelson and Elvis Presley records for dancing. I pretty much had to be dragged kicking and screaming to them but usually had a really good time once I got there, with one very big exception.

Usually the garage dances were attended by all the same local kids that I had grown up with and the girls were more like sisters than potential girlfriends. But one Saturday night, at a garage dance just one block from my home, a new girl suddenly showed up. Her family had apparently just moved in next door to my best friend who was hosting the garage dance and, trying to be good neighbors, his mother had invited her to attend. Well, I took one look at her and started feeling light-headed and strange all over. I had simply never seen such an exotic-looking girl before, although that word wasn't even in my vocabulary yet. She had jet black hair, huge brown eyes, and I simply couldn't take my eyes off her. Then she saw me looking at her, and much to my amazement, smiled at me. Where I got the courage to ask her to dance I will never know, but there we suddenly were, arm-in-arm, doing the West Sac two-step to a very slow song that I hoped would never, ever end. And before it did, just like Riley, I got kissed! It must have been the lipstick she was wearing, or the gum she was chewing, but she tasted even better than she looked! And then, just when I thought I had died and gone to heaven, she started screaming!

> 'Now, one kiss seems pretty harmless,' said my daughter. 'But if we're talking about two or more, then good heavens, that's getting pretty close to making out!'

To make a very long story short, while I was in what can only be described as an other-worldly trance, my right hand had somehow got caught in her bra strap, and struggle as I might to get it free, the more I tried to yank it out, the more entangled it became. Then, with my friends looking at me like I was a younger version of Jack the Ripper, one of the girls with much more bra-expertise than I possessed mercifully came to my rescue and finally freed my hand, but not without glaring at me hatefully first. Worst of all, my best friend strolled over and whispered into my ear, "If I was you, Daryl, I would get out of here real fast, because she has a huge big brother who I think is going to kill you when he hears about this!"

So, Riley, if you should read this little column a few years down the road when puberty hits you with full force, just remember that although it's perfectly okay to kiss girls, just make sure that they don't have really mean-looking and easy-to-anger big brothers who simply won't believe that you can get your hand caught in their sister's bra strap entirely by accident.

Farmers deserve support

Thank you for your article ("Corn as high as an elephant's eye?") on local farmers using abandoned lots for urban farming in the May 7th copy of the News-Ledger. I am proud to live in a city that supports these local farmers and encourages the use of otherwise vacant land in a way that beautifies our city and makes us more self-reliant and sustainable.

Since the inception of the West Sac Farmer's Market, I have had the pleasure of getting to know the local farmers mentioned, Sara Bernal and Daniel Gannon. I have been very impressed with their contributions and dedication to our community. I hope that we, as a community, will likewise support them through our patronage both at the Farmer's Market and at the restaurants that serve their produce, such as Broderick Roadhouse.

I also hope that the neighborhood around this new urban farm at 5th and C Street will try to keep a vigilant eye on it, so as to protect the land from vandalism and theft. If this new venture can be successful, it would be wonderful if it could lead to many more such worthy ventures in our city.

Why did I get a ticket?

I am a fan of the River Cats and go to half of their games each season. But I do not park at Raley Field to avoid the stampede after the game. Instead, I walk to the game, and on April 13th I went to the double-header and parked in an empty field between 5th Street and Riske Lane. I brought my jacket, not knowing what the weather would be like for the second game, and left it in my vehicle. When the first game ended, I walked out to my vehicle and found a ticket on my windshield. Since 5th Street was built as a throughway there has never been any kind of "no parking" sign there and people have been parking there all this time and never received any parking tickets that I have seen.

This Saturday, April 17th, when I walked up Riske Lane I walked slowly and noticed eight vehicles parked there at 6:45 pm. I watched as they left their vehicles with their jackets and blankets and walked to Raley Field.

When I left after the game at 10 pm I was shocked to see that the whole field between 5th Street and Riske Lane was parked with vehicles two-deep and noticed no tickets on any of them. I even asked two different cars of people if they had received tickets and they said no. Yet on April 13th, a slow Sunday at Raley Field, with no "no parking" signs anywhere, I was given a parking ticket. I would like to know why.

Ending child abuse

We want to end child abuse and neglect in Yolo County. During April, many of you helped and we thank you.

Thanks to everyone who bought tickets to the Children's Alliance and Child Abuse Prevention Council's fund raising events during April's Child Abuse Prevention Month and especially our sponsors who gave such generous support to the Project Prevention Fashion Show and the Child Abuse Prevention Family Fun Run. We use the money we raise throughout the year to help children and families get food, health care, parent education, case management, and other services they need to have stable families.

We especially want to thank our sponsors. Once again, we received $10,000 from our lead sponsor -- the Davis Rotary Club!

Other major contributors were Sutter Davis Hospital and the Winn Foundation. Generous donations also were made by Dr. Yvonne Otani, Kaiser Permanente, Richland Communities, Carvalho Family Winery, Hallmark Inn of Davis, California Fuel Cell Partnership, and Broderick Roadhouse Restaurant. Professional photography for the fashion show was provided by M3 Photography.

Many local businesses and individuals donated at the sponsorship level and we greatly appreciate their support. They include Local Laborers Union #150, Davis Waste Removal, Capital West Realty, Bill & Karen Ziebron, The Ziebron Group, Dr. Jorge Ayala, Davis Ace Hardware, NCCT, Aldrete Communications, Dr. Gordon Lee, Capitol Bowl, Laura D. Heintz, Carol von Kaenel, Dr. Dick Huang, Lisa Baker, Patrice Hargrove-Bonfield, and Marnelle Gleason.

Through everyone's combined efforts of donations and ticket purchases, the Children's Alliance raised more than $35,000 during April to support programs and services aimed at making a positive difference in the lives of Yolo County children.

Thank you!

Neustadt for Yolo Supt.

As a parent, one of my top concerns is ensuring that my son receives a quality education. As a community member, I want that same opportunity for every public school student so that they have the skills they need to succeed in our community.

Sam Neustadt is a local parent and experienced educator who shares those goals.

Unlike his opponent, Sam has real classroom experience with a proven track record. In a classic political ploy, his opponent only renewed his administrative credential shortly before his campaign for Superintendent. Sam has more than twenty years of experience, directly in the classroom and at the administrative level.

When it comes to our children's education, we can't have a Superintendent who needs on-the-job training. We need a candidate who can start on day one to ensure excellence in our schools.

Our children deserve nothing less than the best and I hope you'll agree by voting for Sam Neustadt for Yolo County Superintendent.

attitude toward the sins of its past. A desire to see justice done at almost any cost became paramount.

As late as 2009, the mystery of Heim's disappearance seemed almost unsolvable. This highly readable account reveals how historical detection, grit and determination finally illuminated a nation's dramatic reckoning with the crimes of the Holocaust and one of the most shocking war criminals ever.

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"A Birder's Guide to Everything" (PG-13) -- To 15-year-old David (Kodi Smit-McPhee), bird watching (or birding) is his passion, his lifeboat in a confusing sea of hormones. When David snaps a blurry photo of a duck once thought to be extinct, he and his friends quest to get a clear image before their mentor (Ben Kingsley) can swoop in and steal the discovery. All of this birding excitement makes a convenient distraction from the imminent remarriage of David's father.

As a coming-of-age comedy, the film hits every note. David and his friends have the right level of quirkiness to make authentic teenage awkwardness fun to watch on screen. This is the first feature-length offering from director Rob Meyer, and it shows genuine affection for his characters.

"Journey to the West" (PG-13) -- Stephen Chow lands another hit, solidifying his title as the master of kung-fu comedy. In this adaptation of a Chinese classic, shape-shifting demons, big-footed warriors, monster fish and slapstick action collide into one fun movie experience. Xuan Zang (Wen Zhang) is a bumbling young Buddhist monk on a mission: hunt demons from India to China and ultimately confront the Monkey King. In his travels, he befriends a rival demon-hunter, the beautiful and ferocious Miss Duan (Qi Shu). With the right blend of over-the-top animated special effects and real-deal action, this goofball adventure can throw a punch.

"Run & Jump" -- A working-class Irish family faces a difficult transition after the father suffers a rare frontal lobe stroke. The once-strong patriarch of the family is now a collection of confusing behaviors, unable to relate to other people. Complicating things just a bit more is the observer, an American doctor (Will Forte) who asks to stay with the family and document the father's difficult rehabilitation. The doctor can't help being drawn into the family drama. Before last year, Forte was best known for his work on "Saturday Night Live." Since the Oscar nominations for the black-and-white dark comedy/drama "Nebraska," it seems he's successfully branching out into more serious roles.

DOG OF THE WEEK

"Endless Love" (PG-13) -- This remake of a novel adaptation (that's right, a remake of a remake) takes Hollywood's most boilerplate teen romance and somehow manages to make it even blander. There isn't any real conflict or controversy separating the young lovers, David and Jade (Alex Pettyfer and Gabriella Wilde), except that she's rich and he's blue-collar. They just graduated high school, and only recently discovered that the two of them are by far the best-looking people in town. Much of their romance consists of the 20-something-aged actors snuggling in good lighting.

In the second half of the film, however, the plot devices attack. Jade's father is clueless about feelings (but he's a heart doctor!) and takes a villainous stance against the purity of Young Love.

"The Eternal Nazi: From Mauthausen to Cairo, the Relentless Pursuit of SS Doctor Aribert Heim"
by Nicholas Kulish and Souad Mekhennet
(Doubleday, $27.98)

Reviewed by Larry Cox

Aribert Heim worked at the Nazi concentration camp in Mauthausen for only a few months in 1941, but he quickly became known as "Dr. Death." The Austrian SS doctor's experiments on Jews, such as injecting gasoline directly into their hearts and even removing organs from living prisoners without anesthesia, became notorious.

At the end of World War II, Heim slipped out of Germany, evaded capture and eventually settled in a working-class neighborhood of Cairo. In his new homeland, he prayed in Arabic and remained hidden, even though a manhunt for him continued due to the testimony of survivors who told of the doctor's atrocities.

How Heim lived under the radar is the subject of a fascinating new book by Nicholas Kulich, former Berlin bureau chief of The New York Times, and Souad Mekhennet, a seasoned journalist and frequent contributor to both The Washington Post and Daily Beast. It reads more like a mystery novel than a work of nonfiction.

According to the authors, Heim might never have been found if not for the efforts of a group of Germans who were unwilling to let Nazi war criminals go unpunished. Among them was a police investigator, Alfred Aedtner, who turned finding the former Nazi into an obsession. His quest took him across Europe, occupying several decades of his time, and became, in essence, nothing less than a powerful symbol of German's evolv-

The Kitchen Diva

An Ode to Alliums

It's hard to imagine a world without alliums: scallions, leeks, shallots, garlic and onions. In fact, I don't think I want to. But if forced to venture there in my imagination, it would be a land of drab salads, sauces, salsas and dressings.

Onions pack so much flavor in the membranes of their spicy, sometimes sweet layers that, as we all know, a little goes a long way. They sit at the pinnacle of taste, right next to that other beloved allium, garlic. Onions, however, have a slight edge over garlic in that they come in so many shapes and sizes, providing an imaginative cook a broad field of opportunity.

Late spring is when alliums of every kind are coming out of the earth. And while many varieties of onions keep for months in cool, dry storage, fresh onions are a taste treat not to be missed. Right now, you'll find leeks; red, white and yellow bulb onions; scallions, also known as green onions; and shallots at your local farmer's market. Start there if you can. But if not, your local grocery would have to shut its doors if it couldn't provide a decent supply and variety of onions.

Also, to be clear about a continuing confusion, there is no difference between scallions and green onions -- it's simply two names for the same allium. There is a difference, however, between scallions (green onions) and spring onions. Spring onions are very young bulb onions, such as the white, yellow or red variety.

You can tell the difference between a spring onion and a scallion by the size of the bulb. The bulb of a spring onion will be fat and round, while the scallion/green onion will be thin and narrow. When shopping for any onion, make sure the bulb feels firm to the touch. With green or spring onions, look for those with firm, straight stalks. They should still be bright in color with springy roots sprouting from the bulb end.

A wonderful distinction of the scallion/green onion is that it provides a combination of nutritional benefits -- those of onions as well as greens. It also has an unmistakable flavor.

The white of young bulb onions, as well as scallions, is usually sharper than that of large bulb onions, and the more fibrous green stalk has a hot, unmistakable mineral flavor that can punch up a dish in no time. When heated, though, those traits become even more interesting, as the hot and sharp turns a little soft and sweet. This flavorful trait is what makes my recipe for Buttered White Fish with Charred Scallions so delicious.

Buttered White Fish With Charred Scallions

Charring the scallions in a hot skillet adds a depth of flavor that enhances the fish. Whipped butter has one-half the calories of regular, unsalted butter and imparts a richness to this unique fish dish.

2 bunches scallions or green onions, root end removed and discarded
1/4 cup whipped butter
2 tablespoons olive oil or coconut oil
2 (8-ounce) fish filets (any firm, white fish -- bream, cod, halibut, sea bass, sole, tilapia, etc.
1/4 teaspoon Kosher salt
1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1/4 teaspoon lemon pepper

1. Mince both the green and white parts of the scallions. Set aside. Melt the butter in a heavy-bottom skillet over high heat. Add in the oil.

2. Season fish on both sides with the salt and poultry seasoning. Sear fish in skillet; then add in half the scallions; cook until scallions darken and look almost burnt, 3-4 minutes. Reduce heat to medium-low, add remaining scallions, and sprinkle fish with lemon pepper. Cook until fish is done, 6-8 minutes. Serves 2.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

Notice to Potential Bidders If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a Trustee auction. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same Lender may hold more than one mortgage or Deed of Trust on the property. Notice to Property Owner The sale date shown on this Notice of Sale may be postponed one or more times by the Mortgagee, Beneficiary, Trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about Trustee Sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale.
